TL; DR.

In our decentralized and distributed organization, we refer to our international marketing consultants as "Nodes." Unlike traditional employees, Nodes are freelancers, offering the flexibility to work with Ubinodes as a secondary job. Each Node operates under a formal contract with Ubinodes OÜ, a company incorporated in Estonia.

Payment for Nodes is structured on hourly fees rather than commission-based compensation. Notably, Nodes are remunerated using our proprietary cryptocurrency, essential for upholding the organization's principles of decentralization and censorship resistance.

The UBI token traded on the Waves decentralized exchange, allows Nodes to exchange value against various currencies, including Euro, USD, Bitcoin, and more.

7.1 Global Experience.

Ubinodes Internship Program in Collaboration with Global Experience

Ubinodes OÜ, a leading international marketing company headquartered in Estonia, is thrilled to offer internship opportunities to students through a partnership with Global Experience, a reputable organization based in the United States.

This collaboration brings together students from diverse countries, backgrounds, and cultures, enriching the learning experience.

To accommodate students from various backgrounds, Ubinodes has tailored its on-boarding process. It's important to note that the term "candidate" is used universally for all individuals, encompassing both seasoned professionals and students.

Despite the partnership with Global Experience, students participating in our internships are not expected to transition into consultant roles at Ubinodes upon completion of their internship period.

This adjustment in our on-boarding process ensures a seamless and inclusive experience for students, aligning with our commitment to fostering a global learning environment. Ubinodes welcomes students from around the world to engage in a dynamic and enriching internship program designed to provide valuable insights into the realm of international marketing.

7.2 Candidates.

Revolutionizing On-boarding: The Ubinodes Internship Program

Ubinodes has reshaped its on-boarding approach, introducing an innovative internship program that welcomes diverse candidates, including seasoned consultants aspiring to join our dynamic team.

Our empirical insights have revealed that the ideal Ubinodes consultant, or "node," is not exclusively defined by diplomas or prior experiences.

The introduction of an internship program has allowed us to raise the bar, focusing on elevating candidates' skills while instilling the unique culture that characterizes Ubinodes.

The internship journey is meticulously structured into distinct "stages," each featuring a series of tasks assigned to the student or candidate.

Throughout this transformative process, individuals work under the thoughtful guidance of a mentor, creating a supportive environment for skill development and cultural assimilation.

The duration of the internship is flexible, enabling candidates to progress at their own pace. The completion timeline is directly tied to the successful mastery of skills from one stage to the next.

Crucially, Ubinodes maintains a steadfast commitment to uphold a rigorous standard throughout the internship process.

Each stage builds upon the skills acquired in the previous one, ensuring a thorough learning experience.

At Ubinodes, we do not cut corners; instead, we champion a holistic approach to skill development, empowering candidates to confidently navigate the challenges and opportunities within our organization.

7.3 Feedback.

At Ubinodes, we prioritize the continuous improvement of our internship program to ensure it remains dynamic and impactful. We actively encourage candidates to share their valuable feedback on each task undertaken.

This iterative process of feedback allows us to make real-time adjustments, tailoring the internship to better suit the evolving needs and expectations of our candidates.

7.4 Stages.

Currently, we have five stages.

Stage 1: Formality.

Ubinodes prioritizes security and privacy for our clients. Therefore, your journey begins with the commitment of signing a binding non-disclosure agreement (NDA).

Following this, we'll guide you through the installation of a secure communication application, marking the initiation of the robust on-boarding process outlined below.

Stage 2: Security.

- This stage focuses on aligning with Ubinodes' stringent standards for data and communication security and privacy. New candidates are unable to commence any work until they are proficient in utilizing Ubinodes' applications and processes.

The emphasis is on candidates familiarizing themselves with Ubinodes' standards and procedures on security and privacy.

Becoming acquainted with Ubinodes' preferred software is crucial, as effective participation is dependent on this knowledge. Candidates are encouraged to grasp Ubinodes' stance on confidentiality and its implications for fellow team members.

When new candidates join Ubinodes, there are critical details outlined in the disclosure agreement that they should be aware of:

- Candidates should comprehend Ubinodes' stance on confidentiality and its implications for the day-to-day work of individuals within the company.
- New candidates will encounter intellectual property as a crucial aspect while collaborating with other nodes.
- Candidates should understand that security is one of Ubinodes' top priorities, and they are responsible for securing the devices they will be working on.

Stage 3: Producing.

Candidates are now working on productive tasks to sharpen their skills and prepare for billable tasks.

The goal is to enhance their capabilities for future projects, such as presentations, writing articles, and conducting marketing campaigns.

- Conducting research and publishing articles.
- Executing marketing campaigns.
- Drafting internal manuals.
- Delivering public presentations.

Stage 4: Coaching.

By coaching new individuals, the candidate is honing presentation and social skills, crucial in the field of business, particularly for international marketing.

This could involve assisting new candidates in earlier stages, engaging with clients, or conducting presentations both online and onsite.

Stage 5: Supervising.

The candidate is now overseeing intricate projects to prepare for the role of project management in international marketing tasks.

7.5 Tasks.

Each task is introduced with context-setting questions:

1. What is this article about?

2. Why do you need it?

The "What is this article about?" section provides an explanation of the task topic, and "Why do you need it?" offers insights into the purpose behind the task.

Following these contextualizing questions are guidelines covering the deadline, feedback process, security measures, sources, and any other pertinent information to swiftly familiarize the candidate with the task.

7.6 Logic.

The tasks assigned during the internship progress through stages of Junior, Senior, Coach, and Supervisor, marking a developmental journey.

In the initial stages, candidates work "IN" the business, collaborating with mentors and other nodes, and gaining hands-on experience in various aspects of international marketing consultancy.

Simultaneously, candidates also work "ON" the business, engaging in tasks that enhance the internal workings of the organization, such as creating internal manuals or handling System admin duties.

As candidates accumulate understanding, they transition to coaching new candidates and supervising projects.

7.7 Deadline.

Deadlines are established for each stage or task of the on-boarding process. This is done because we continually bring new candidates on board, and occasionally, they may become MIA (Missing in Action), ceasing communication without notice.

As we work with individuals worldwide from diverse backgrounds, factors like internet or power issues, and political or economic challenges may arise.

To address this, a deadline is set, after which candidates may be removed from the process.

However, we understand unforeseen circumstances, and if you consistently communicate with us, the on-boarding process can continue past the deadline.

Simple gestures like sending a message through the communication app count as signs of life. If you wish to discontinue, kindly inform us rather than going silent.

Methodology.

9. Methodology.

Keywords: Security & Resilience

1. Judicial System Threat Defeat:

Ubinodes differentiates by countering the most sinister threats, including corruption of the judicial system.

2. Strength in Every Node:

An organization's strength is akin to its weakest link. Nodes, teaching clients about communication and data security, must exemplify resilience and strength.

3. Ubinodes' Exceptional Standards:

Ubinodes set unparalleled standards in contrast to thousands of marketing agencies. Elevating candidates to these standards is imperative before client-facing roles.

4. Security Competency:

Candidates often lack:

- Competence in securing computers, mobile devices, and communications.
- Self-discipline to avoid reverting to insecure methods.

Skillset:

1. Security-First Mentality:

Mentors guide candidates in cultivating new work habits prioritizing security over convenience.

2. Global Team Collaboration:

Candidates collaborate in a global team of Nodes, learning effective teamwork despite time differences, and utilizing secure productivity tools.

Tasks:

1. Installation of Productivity Applications:

- Set up working environments aligning with Ubinodes' standards, including:
- Installing password managers (e.g., Nordpass, Bitwarden).
- Integrating secure communication and synchronization apps (e.g., Wickr, Wire, Session, Resilio).

- Creating accounts with secure email providers (e.g., Protonmail, Tutanota).
- Establishing accounts on secure productivity platforms (e.g., CryptPad).
- Encrypting Hard Drives (e.g., Bitlocker).
- Creating cryptocurrency wallets for UBI tokens.

2 Content Creation:

Candidates update or write articles published on Ubinodes' website(s).

3. Manuals and Documentation:

Candidates update internal manuals or craft new ones to enhance organizational knowledge.

9.2 Drafting.

Keywords: Inspiration & Leveraging.

Firstly, Ubinodes operate on decentralized and distributed principles, necessitating a shared working standard among nodes.

While internal manuals exist, proficiency in IT tools, adherence to publishing standards, meeting deadlines, following security protocols, and embracing communication guidelines are non-negotiable.

Optimal functioning requires all consultants to be consistently aligned in pursuit of common goals, sharing a unified vision, and adhering to internally developed standards through a continual iterative process.

Secondly, consultants at Ubinodes charge hourly fees for their work, steering away from commission-based structures. To maximize the value of their time, consultants must be multifaceted experts capable of monetizing knowledge.

The focus shifts to viewing learning as a means to become an authority in a subject, facilitating the creation of training courses, articles, and presentations.

Notetaking transforms into a meticulous process, capturing every detail for potential conversion into valuable content.

Experience has shown that candidates often lack skills in writing publishable articles, functioning in international team contexts, understanding mass surveillance and financial regulations, and adopting the consultant mindset, having been traditionally groomed for employee roles.

Skillset.

A mentor guides candidates in harnessing their learning by diligently taking detailed notes to update or create articles, preparing presentations, and more.

The organization's credibility is enhanced with each article published on the website, making it easier to attract new clients.

For any consulting agency, the alignment between claimed expertise and the website's look and feel is crucial when charging clients for services.

The process involves leveraging skills and knowledge to expand offerings and transition from a student/employee mindset to that of an independent consultant. Candidates acquire new business methods, self-discipline, and a transformative mindset.

Tasks.

To guide candidates in adopting robust habits for data and communication security, we direct them to pertinent articles already published on our website.

Familiarity with these articles is crucial, as candidates, once fully on-boarded, will reference them when guiding their own clients.

To ensure mastery of these topics, candidates are tasked with preparing updates for select articles.

Additionally, candidates are encouraged to read and draft articles on subjects like mass surveillance, finance, economy, blockchain, etc., which will eventually become their original articles.

Updating.

Keywords: Belonging & Duty.

At Ubinodes, characterized by its decentralized and distributed nature, decisions are collectively reached through consensus, and everyone contributes to writing and updating internal manuals.

Aligned with the principles outlined in the whitepaper, the growth of the organization equally benefits all nodes. As a consultant at Ubinodes, individuals share a vision of what a modern organization should embody.

Contrary to the competitive mindset often ingrained in candidates, Ubinodes operates as a cohesive team, emphasizing that the collective outcome surpasses individual efforts.

New nodes are guided to actively collaborate with others to achieve superior results compared to working in isolation.

Skillset.

Mentors play a crucial role in guiding candidates to enhance their recently acquired skills and effectively collaborate within teams at the organization.

Through active participation in front-end activities, candidates develop a sense of belonging, as their work becomes public and accessible on Ubinodes' websites.

Tasks.

Candidates are assigned the responsibility of updating existing articles on Ubinodes' website(s) after thoroughly reading them.

This task serves a dual purpose: assessing candidates' understanding of the subject matter and introducing them to Content Management Software (CMS).

By actively participating in the updating process, candidates showcase their research skills and proficiency in conveying complex topics, a skill set essential for teaching clients and maintaining high-security standards.

09.3 Researching.

Keywords: Methodology & Creativity.

Candidates are encouraged to transition from merely consuming content to actively producing valuable materials. Taking notes has evolved from personal use to becoming a tool for creating articles, presentations, and training courses.

This shift prepares candidates for a more comprehensive role where they contribute to complex projects, aligning with Ubinodes' focus on full-scale import/export initiatives managed holistically.

The goal is to move beyond a platform resembling Upwork and establish Ubinodes as an organization overseeing end-to-end projects.

Skillset.

Candidates, under mentorship, are encouraged to unleash their creativity, explore avenues to generate new article ideas, access relevant sources, and hone skills in analysis and presentation.

Ubinodes values creativity as a pivotal attribute that ensures the organization's adaptability and continual pursuit of optimal efficiency.

This phase aims to foster autonomy and self-reliance in candidates, providing a glimpse into the consultant's lifestyle working remotely, conducting research, and transforming knowledge into meta-research that benefits others.

This progressive approach prepares candidates for involvement in more intricate projects.

Tasks.

Candidates, having reached this stage, are tasked with crafting articles from scratch, covering assigned subjects and adhering to provided writing guidelines.

In preparation, they were earlier assigned to draft articles on entirely new topics, ensuring a repository of material for this stage. Candidates delve into research, initiating the drafting process, and may also contribute to Sponsored Projects.

Recognizing the global impact of these articles on the organization's credibility, candidates engage in a peer-review process before publication. This approach instills a shift from an "exam score" mindset to a "product delivery" mentality.

Candidates actively seek feedback, comments, and suggestions from peers, viewing them not as judgments but as opportunities for improvement.

This mindset transformation fosters a coaching approach, where individuals contribute to each other's growth and enhance Ubinodes' overall output.

9.4 Engaging.

Keywords: Independence & Awareness.

Social media plays a pivotal role for Ubinodes in client and candidate acquisition. Operating as a decentralized and distributed organization, active participation in social media tasks is a collective.

Skillset.

The mentor is helping candidates transition into becoming ambassadors for the organization, taking on the responsibility of representing our brand to the external world.

Copyright: European Union Public License, version 1.2 (EUPL-1.2).

This involves raising awareness and engaging with clients on an international scale, reaching out to startups, SMEs, investors, industries, government bodies, and other external stakeholders.

While candidates have developed a strong sense of belonging within the organization, they are now encouraged to extend this connection beyond its boundaries.

Tasks.

Following internal manuals, candidates establish free social media accounts across various platforms. This allows candidates to engage directly with potential clients and candidates.

While they may not have all the answers at this stage, the experience of being in direct contact with individuals as representatives of the organization helps them adapt their communication and behavior.

These skills are crucial for freelance consultants. It's important to note that those not willing or able to perform these tasks might be better suited for employee positions.

Currently, if candidates identify potential clients or candidates and qualify them, they pass them on to senior nodes.

9.5 Publishing.

Keywords: Credibility & Expertise.

Firstly: Ubinodes, while centered around marketing, recognizes that in today's environment of mass surveillance, corruption, and currency weaponization, mastering IT security is essential before delving into international marketing.

Nodes are not only expected to execute marketing tasks but also to educate clients about IT security as an integral part of any business project.

Additionally, nodes are expected to give presentations, teach, or write articles about finance, economy, and marketing. The emphasis on teaching sets a high standard for the expertise gained through the internship program.

Secondly: A consultant's role involves providing unbiased reports, marketing plans, or research that clients use to make decisions.

To achieve this, candidates must learn how to create a "sterile" work environment where external influences don't impact their decisions. Professional research is the foundation of a consultant's job.

When publishing articles, candidates are mindful that they are utilizing readers' time, emphasizing the importance of creating content that is valuable and worth the audience's time.

This development instills commitment, attention to detail, an understanding of customer satisfaction principles, and an awareness of how published content affects organizational credibility.

Candidates have been upskilled in IT proficiency, attention to detail, international teamwork, commitment, creativity, autonomy, and self-reliance.

They are now conscious of the risks associated with mass surveillance in international business and have acquired skills to mitigate these risks.

Candidates have demonstrated their ability to work in teams on simple projects, secure data and communication, complete solo or mentor-assisted projects requiring expertise, and contribute to teams on paid projects.

Skillset.

The mentor is steering candidates toward taking ownership and responsibility for their work, emphasizing a cost-effectiveness mentality that considers time and money in the equation.

Candidates are guided to understand the level of quality required to be considered credible in the space, emphasizing the importance of reaching this standard for credibility.

The mentor is working to shift candidates away from a student mentality, characterized by deciphering expectations, and the outward inward mindset driven by social acceptance needs.

Instead, candidates are encouraged to adopt a results-oriented mentality, focusing on cost-effectiveness, risk-reward balance, accuracy, credibility, and trustworthiness.

The goal is to groom candidates into a mindset where they prioritize results over external perceptions.

As Ubinodes is centered around international marketing, candidates are tasked with activities that contribute to the creation of access to markets, starting with the development of a marketing plan.

This involves conducting marketing research and creating business articles that define Ubinodes' market positioning.

The mentor guides candidates to become independent nodes, positioning them as experts in their own country/state, responsible for facing clients and supervising marketing plans.

At this stage, candidates are introduced to more complex projects, where they work as part of a team under the supervision of a lead node.

While the mentor remains focused on the internship process, candidates gain valuable experience and learn from others in a collaborative team environment.

Tasks.

Candidates progress to conducting a comprehensive market study, typically focused on their country or state. The resulting article is published on Ubinodes' website and shared on social media platforms.

This task provides candidates with the opportunity to apply their theoretical knowledge extensively, and there is no limit to the depth of the marketing study, covering aspects such as economy, politics, finance, regulation, history, and more.

Candidates learn to write in a manner that is appealing to prospective customers, effectively "selling" their target market while providing factual, truthful, detailed, and relevant information for manufacturers considering exporting.

Following a peer review process and iterative adjustments, candidates publish their articles on Ubinodes' website, and these are further shared on social media channels.

Candidates are encouraged to share their articles with their networks, including friends and relatives.

Candidates also participate in a Sponsored Project, collaborating with other contributors until the project's completion.

Assigned specific tasks by the lead node, candidates coordinate with other participants to contribute to the overall success of the project. This phase further enhances their practical experience and teamwork skills within a real-world project scenario.

Rite of passage.

Candidates reach a significant milestone in their on-boarding process by publishing a short marketing plan for their country or state.

This represents a "rite of passage" or a "Hello World" moment for candidates. In this task, they not only create their article but also focus on their market.

The marketing plan becomes a showcase of what they will be "selling" to potential clients, providing a practical application of their skills and knowledge acquired during the on-boarding process.

This task serves as a tangible demonstration of their readiness to engage with clients and contribute meaningfully to Ubinodes' objectives.

Agreement.

After candidates have successfully published their articles about their country or state, they have the opportunity to enter into a formal agreement with Ubinodes to become official nodes.

This step grants them the authority to sign contracts with clients on behalf of the organization.

However, for students participating in an internship, this formal agreement is not mandatory to continue the program.

The option to become official nodes provides candidates with the autonomy and responsibility to represent Ubinodes in client engagements, marking a transition from the internship phase to a more active role within the organization.

09.6 Coaching.

Keywords: Responsibility & Confidence.

To instill self-confidence in candidates, mentors guide them through mastering essential skills and knowledge areas.

The goal is for candidates to not only understand these subjects themselves but also to be capable of teaching others.

The mentorship process aims to empower candidates to become influencers rather than being influenced by external factors.

Additionally, candidates are expected to achieve mastery in topics like mass surveillance and financial regulation, which are fundamental to their roles as consultants.

This foundational knowledge is crucial before candidates progress into supervisory and project management responsibilities.

Skillset.

Page 32 of 46. Last Revised 21 June 2021.

Copyright: European Union Public License, version 1.2 (EUPL-1.2).

In this stage, candidates are actively engaged in the organization's activities under the guidance of the mentor.

All nodes, including candidates, share equal responsibility for the organization's maintenance, manual writing, client acquisition, candidate recruitment, and development.

The mentor leads candidates toward becoming proactive contributors to the organization's overall functioning.

Tasks.

Candidates are actively involved in coaching new candidates, guiding them through their initial tasks, and sharing the knowledge they have recently acquired.

This experience not only reinforces their own learning but also contributes to the growth and development of new members within the organization. It emphasizes the importance of knowledge sharing and collaboration within the Ubinodes community.

09.7 Expanding.

Keywords: Web siting & Presenting.

Candidates are now positioned to transition into a role where they can teach and guide others based on the expertise they have developed.

This shift towards mentorship and knowledge dissemination reflects their mastery of various tasks within Ubinodes and their readiness to contribute to the growth and learning of the community.

Additionally, candidates have demonstrated their project management skills in supervising roles, particularly in Sponsored Projects.

This involves handling technical projects and coaching an international team, showcasing their ability to navigate complex tasks and lead teams effectively.

This expertise is considered crucial in the context of Ubinodes' emphasis on technology as a means to counteract mass surveillance and facilitate international business operations.

Skillset.

At this stage, candidates are being guided by the mentor to take on more advanced responsibilities, including setting up and managing their own website for their country or state.

This step is crucial for establishing a local online presence, especially if candidates need to create websites for clients to enhance their visibility before exporting goods.

Candidates are also encouraged to deliver presentations to clients on various subjects, further showcasing their expertise and building confidence in their consulting capabilities.

As Ubinodes aims to generate a steady income stream through a range of consulting services, candidates play an active role in seeking clients and bringing in contracts for the organization.

The mentor emphasizes the candidates' responsibility in actively pursuing contracts for Ubinodes, aligning with the decentralized and distributed nature of the organization.

While candidates have previously published articles to promote Ubinodes' countries, the focus now shifts to actively seeking and engaging clients, particularly manufacturers interested in exporting.

The goal is to secure contracts for comprehensive marketing plans that facilitate exports from the sending country to the candidate's home country.

The selection of the sending country is contingent upon the availability and willingness of other nodes to participate in the project. This collaborative approach reflects Ubinodes' commitment to leveraging the expertise of its decentralized team.

Tasks.

At this stage, candidates are actively engaged in creating websites from scratch, reaching out to clients, and offering free presentations on specific subjects.

The goal is to showcase their expertise and attract potential clients.

Additionally, candidates are tasked with designing marketing campaigns and utilizing social media or email, to promote a Sponsored Project.

Their involvement in the sponsored project ensures they have sufficient knowledge to create effective promotional campaigns.

Crucially, candidates gain the authority to sign contracts on behalf of the organization.

This empowerment reflects their progression within Ubinodes and underscores their readiness to take on more responsibilities.

Furthermore, candidates are challenged with designing comprehensive marketing campaigns tailored to target manufacturers.

The objective is to offer manufacturers end-to-end services for exporting their products, demonstrating Ubinodes' capability to manage all necessary aspects for optimal results.

This initiative aligns with Ubinodes' mission to actively seek and secure contracts, contributing to the organization's growth and success.

09.8 Supervising.

Keywords: Leadership & Maturity.

As candidates have integrated into Ubinodes and gained experience, they are expected to actively apply key principles outlined in the organization's whitepaper, including AdHoc teams and Pruning.

These concepts need to be translated into practical actions by the candidates in their daily responsibilities and collaborative efforts with other nodes.

This application of principles enhances the efficiency and adaptability of Ubinodes' operations.

Skillset.

At this stage, candidates are guided by the mentor to leverage the knowledge and experience acquired throughout the internship stages to develop leadership skills.

Having learned from others, candidates now take on a supervisory role, overseeing and guiding newer candidates in their tasks.

This transition to a leadership position is crucial for their growth within Ubinodes and contributes to the decentralized and collaborative nature of the organization.

Tasks.

In this stage, candidates are tasked with supervising a Sponsored Project. As part of their preparation, they were initially assigned to draft a review article on a Sponsored Project.

Now, they are responsible for running a marketing campaign, assembling a team, and overseeing the entire project until its completion.

This hands-on experience in project supervision further develops their leadership skills within the decentralized structure of Ubinodes.
